Text 1

W: This afternoon, we will take a break from the normal school schedule and go for a walk in the forest.
Tomorrow you can write essays about it.

M: But I have a dentist appointment this afternoon.

Text 2

W: Look at all the litter blowing about. Why don't people put it in the bins provided?

M: To be fair, a lot of rubbish has probably been blown out of the bins.

W: Then if it rains tomorrow, it will stick to the ground.

Text 3

W: Change the channel. The big game is coming on soon.

M: Didn't you say you wanted to watch the movie?

W: I did, but it will be showing again tomorrow. I can see it then.

Text 4

M: Sorry, Judith, I had no idea that you had been sitting outside in the car since 4:00 p.m. I should have finished the meeting earlier.

W: Oh, don't worry. I forgot to tell you that I would be leaving.

Text 5

M: I didn't realize this job was going to be so hard. I don't think I'm fit for this job.

W: Come on, Max. At least you have a steady income, considering how tough the economy is.

Text 6

M: Victoria, you're 17 now. This is your last year of high school, and the track competitions are really important.

W: I can't focus on both the running team and doing well in school.

M: The last two years were easier, but now colleges will look at you for their track teams.

W: What if I get a scholarship, but it's not from a top school?

M: You've been running since you were 9. This is a great chance for you.

W: I'm not sure if being a runner will make my parents happy, especially if I go to an average college.

Text 7

M: Look, this is my first website. What do you think?

W: Keith, you did this by yourself? It looks fantastic!

M: Thanks, Mom. I'm taking a business class right now, and a part of my final project is to create a fictional (虚构的) business. So, I designed a website for extra points.

W: Did your teacher ask you to do so, or was this your idea?

M: It was my idea! I watched videos online that explained computer programming and website design. I learned these skills because those videos inspired me.

W: I'm proud of you, dear. You're so independent.

M: Well, without my dad, I couldn't have finished the project all by myself.

W: You two are naturally talented with all things about technology. I'm helpless when it comes to working on computers.

M: Oh, Mom. I'll teach you!

Text 8

W: Glad you've joined my agriculture operation. You'll learn a lot here!

M: Great. So, are you currently having a big harvest or are there many customers visiting?

W: Mainly, we have guests coming. The main groups are from primary schools. They're from cities nationwide, coming to learn about food production.

M: Oh, I assumed the majority of your business was selling vegetables, meat, and milk products.

W: That's a smaller part. Anyway, like you, most of the volunteers are high school students looking to gain community service experience.

M: Yes. This experience will help with my college entrance applications — that's my primary focus.

W: Well, we also provide excellent college recommendation letters.

M: Perfect. My family will pick me up here in around two hours. What should we do before then?

W: First, time for a tour. Before we visit the animals and feeding areas, I'll show you the supply room. There you'll learn about all the equipment you'll be using.

M: Wow! I'm excited already!

Text 9

W: Daniel Chen is a 28-year-old professional chess player. Daniel, how did you begin your journey in playing chess?

M: I got interested in chess after watching a documentary in the early 2000s. It made me curious about the strategies and thinking behind the game.

W: Can you describe a typical competition day?

M: One of the most attractive aspects of being a professional chess player is the flexibility. There is no standard day. One day I might spend my time competing in a tournament at the World Championship, and I will follow the tournament schedule for as long as I remain in it. The next day I might wake up not feeling like competing and decide to rest or work on one of my other projects.

W: Can you describe a reality of being a professional chess player that other people may not realize?

M: The flexibility is a two-sided coin. You are your own manager and generally there's no one to give you directions on what to do or where to be. But you can often feel isolated because there is no real sense of teamwork in chess.

Welcome everyone and thank you for joining us. As you know, this will be our last meeting before we set off to Thailand, so I'd like to review the details of the four projects we'll be carrying out there. Our first destination will be Bangkok, where we will arrive on December 8th. We will be there for ten days, organizing a cleanup of rivers in the area. The goal is that fish populations will eventually recover in the area. On December 18th, we will travel south to Phuket, where we will be planting trees. We hope the hundreds of trees we plant over ten days will help restore the condition of the coastline. From December 28th until heading home on January 25th, we will be in Chiang Mai, where we hope to clear polluted waterways, to allow wildlife to return to the clean water environment they used to inhabit. While in Chiang Mai, we'll also conduct workshops with the local residents to raise awareness about protecting their water resources and maintaining a healthy environment. Now, does anyone have any questions or additional comments?
